Astonishing Return of Wild Turkeys

By George B. Emmons

Flocks of wild turkeys are being seen everywhere along the south shore in abundant numbers, even in suburban back yards after having been completely depleted from all of Massachusetts for hundreds of years.

In 1969 they were brought back and very successfully transplanted from Pennsylvania and nearby other states where they had also been revived from elimination due to over hunting and deforestation. U.S. Fish and Wildlife had found that the most effective method of transplanting was to bring them back from other areas, otherwise almost hopeless and impossible.

You can now easily find them around where you live by getting up early in the morning to look for them foraging around forest clearings under nut-bearing trees such as oak and hickory, easily spotted from your car window, as in my illustration.

Wild turkeys have become a more traditional, historic symbol domesticated as part of the traditional Thanksgiving feast since the pilgrims brought them to the new world in the Mayflower in the year 1620. They were not on the menu of the first celebration but were saved to breed and raise for future food for newly arrived settlers.

Originally found on this continent by Spaniards in Mexico, Turkeys were raised by ancient civilizations of Aztecs and Mayans for religious festivals several times a year because they represented a spiritual god producing a bountiful cornucopia for all of mankind.

The American symbolism of the turkey also took on a national significance when Abraham Lincoln declared it to be a national holiday in the year 1864. And it became a historical symbol of plenty when Norman Rockwell painted his famous Saturday Night cover illustration of "freedom from want," showing a matronly cook serving a roast turkey to a smiling family around the dinner table.

It also became a media boost in public opinion later when several presidents awarded several turkeys slated for the White House oven pardons from the highest office in the land. Then young children in grammar school learned to draw turkey figures for seasonal cards for members of their families.

Now, more than four hundred years after the first celebration in the Plymouth Plantation, as we sit down at the festive table featuring a roast turkey to say grace and give thanks for the food we eat, as well as all the other blessings of life on this holiday, let us be thankful and blessed by the bountiful earth and almighty god in the heavens smiling down on the turkey we are about to appreciate even more after reading all about it.

Emmons, whose column in this issue discusses the revival of the bird symbolic to America's Thanksgiving tradition. Despite being brought to America by colonists in 1620, hunting and deforestation had made them scarce in the northeast until U.S. Fish and Wildlife began transplanting them back from other areas in 1969. Now they are plentiful and roam freely in our neighborhoods. Illustration by George B. Emmons Massachusetts State Police made following her July 17 arrest after being pulled over along Route 28 north while returning from a golf outing in Falmouth.

At her July 19 arraignment to respond to charges of Operating Under the Influence and a marked lanes violation, Lyons entered a not guilty plea and was released on personal recognizance. After the arraignment, her attorney Robert Nolan told reporters that there were witnesses whose testimony would contradict the charges.

Lyons, 61, has not been back to Falmouth District Court since the arraignment, appearing in pre-trial sessions via Zoom. Nolan, who last month filed a discovery motion seeking video from the arresting officer's body camera and dash camera, was back in court on November 18 to seek the trial date.

Since Lyons' arrest, the Mattapoissett Police Department has been under the interim command of Captain Jason King. Lyons, meanwhile, agreed to terms of early retirement accepted and approved by the Select Board on August 5.

Rochester's Library Director to Retire By Marilou Newell

Gail Roberts, the Joseph Plumb Memorial Library director, met with the Rochester Select Board on November 15 to announce her intentions to retire on June 30, 2022, the end of Fiscal Year 2022. Roberts has been at the helm of the small but mighty community library for 15 years, but now she believes it's time to give herself some space to pursue other passions.

A 1972 graduate of Old Rochester Regional High School, Roberts studied library sciences at Drexel University, later spending 17 years as a children's librarian in Philadelphia, Brookline, Marion and New Bedford.

"I didn't know you could be a children's librarian," said Roberts, smiling at the thought of her long career guiding young readers.

In that role, Roberts would become a storyteller and develop afterschool programming. She credits a cousin with suggesting that she pursue a career in library arts. Roberts rather casually agreed it might be worth exploring, and the rest, as they say, is "history."

Roberts' career has found her in big cities such as Philadelphia and metropolitan Boston, as well as small towns. "When the position opened up here, it seemed right. ... I always wanted to work in a small library," she confessed. "I've been happy here."

Of modern libraries, Roberts said, "At first it was just books, then slowly libraries added other types of materials people could check out like cake pans and VCR tapes."

Today with the advent of computers, Roberts says the entire world has opened up. So where does that leave libraries? She believes the relevance of libraries is stronger than ever. "In order for libraries to remain relevant, they will have to continue to find ways to embrace technology," she said.

Roberts said that people depended on the library and its flexibility to provide services during COVID-19 restrictions. "E-books, movies, TV programming, we have been able provide a lot of services ... it has been a lifesaver."

And what of Roberts future plans? "Well, I live in a 200-year-old farmhouse so there's always something to do," she said. In fact, Roberts' roots are in that farmhouse, her grandmother's home at one time, Minnie Tinkham's home.

Roberts doesn't say so, but it is evident in her expression that she is very proud of her heritage. She spoke with great fondness of her grandmother, a woman of many talents including music. The Tinkhams and the Roberts, along with other extended family members, could have their own orchestra given the amount of musical talent that runs through their genes. Yet, like a true perfectionist, Roberts is still taking piano lessons despite playing since she was a small child.

One of the annual events that Roberts helped to maintain over the years was the Christmas sing-along at the Tinkhamtown Chapel. Following in her grandmother's footsteps and with the help of family and the entire tri-town community, this coming together in celebration had been the cornerstone of the holiday seasons for generations. Roberts has for many years taken over the job of playing the antique pump organ for the holiday show. Sadly, the pandemic has for now put a stop to gatherings in the petite chapel, but in memory of that much-loved seasonal event, we share these comments from an earlier interview with Roberts.

"Roberts, one of the committee members for the annual sing-along, has generations of Tinkhamtown DNA flowing through her veins. Roberts' grandmother was the locally well-known Minnie Tinkham, who for decades coordinated this annual event. 'My grandmother played the organ, which she had to pump back then, and we had to sing all the verses of every carol, too,' said a smiling Roberts. She said that despite the organ requiring strong untiring legs, her grandmother insisted that each and every verse of each and every carol be fully played. Nowadays, the pump organ is connected to a vacuum pump that pushes air through the aging machine."

It is that kind of New England backbone that has helped Roberts keep Rochester's library strong. Looking towards the future, she believes Rochester has been very supportive of the library, something she said not all towns

Select Board Begins Project Prioritization

Mattapoisett Select Board

By Marilou Newell

The November 22 meeting of the Mattapoisett Select Board was a "working" meeting to review a five-page list of projects and to begin prioritizing the to-do list into attainable goals for Town Administrator Mike Lorenzo and department heads across municipal offices.

The list contained over 25 specific projects ranging from roadway improvement, the study of school enrollment and two buildings, bike path phases, IT system upgrades, stormwater drainage issues, harborside needs, and the operating budget for the new fire station.

Bubbling to the top of the list for immediate action with a completion date of February was the installation of a new generator for the senior housing complex off Main Street. With a price tag of $70,000 to install the needed equipment before winter arrives, Lorenzo said that Representative Bill Straus was looking into grant money for the installation expenses. He also noted that Mattapoisett Housing Authority Chairman Chuck McCullough was also looking into funding sources.

The Community Compact Grant that the town received for the study of municipal buildings including local schools and enrollment numbers was one of the seven top items to be tackled.

Select Board member Tyler Macallister asked that the report on the local schools be completed with recommendation by the February deadline. While discussing the Community Compact grant that included study of the Transfer Station operation (not in the top seven), Lorenzo shared that data requested by the study team was difficult to access but that new Board of Health agent Gail Joseph is now focusing on that project.

Mattapoisett's historic wharves were in the top seven list regarding the repairs needed for Long Wharf. Lorenzo will gather existing engineering studies and work with bidders who have asked for more details on the current state of the aging wharf.

In the category of the Complete Street grant monies the town received, the safety of crossing Route 6 at the intersection of Mattapoisett Neck Road was discussed. Board members discussed one aspect of the larger project, sidewalks being installed along Mattapoisett Neck Road from the intersection of the bike path to near the intersection of Route 6. But how to safely cross Route 6 remains an issue for the board. Lorenzo will discuss safety options with Massachusetts Department of Transportation, including the possibility of painting crosswalks across the busy state highway.

Emergency Preparedness plans, which were started but never completed, will once again see the light of day as Lorenzo noted he has begun working with the police department's safety officer.

Lorenzo also committed to completing a RFP for the sale of the soon-to-be-vacated, old fire station to ready the building for sale. He will also invite architect Steve Kelliher to a board meeting to ascertain the status of designs and cost estimates for needed upgrades and repairs to the Highway Department Building on Mendell Road.

Earlier in the meeting, the board met with Kathy Costello, administrator of assessing for a tax classification hearing. Once again, the board agreed that a single tax rate is necessary, considering that the number of commercial units is too low to make an impact on residential property owners.

Costello gave a brief report that demonstrated an increase in the average single-family home rose by 7.9 percent with the average home selling for $578,024. The total amount of revenue to be raised by both tax sources and non-tax sources during FY22 was reported to be $38,371,444, a 9.3-percent increase over the prior fiscal year. The proposed single-tax rate for FY22 is planned to be $12.47 per one thousand of assessed valuation, a $0.49 or 3.9-percent increase over FY21.

The board approved the tax classification.

The next regular meeting of the Mattapoisett Select Board is planned for Tuesday, December 14, at 6:30 pm.

ZBA Mindful of Creep Issue

Marion Zoning Board of Appeals

By Mick Colageo

When Evelyn Hafferty Fischer went before the Marion Zoning Board of Appeals on November 18, seeking permission to connect two structures at 20 Beach Street so that her father can live full time on her property, ZBA members were enthusiastically supportive of her application and at the same time sympathetic toward concerned abutters.

ZBA member Dana Nilson told the board that he has an in-law apartment on his property and considers it "very important." He said the apartment did not increase the size of his house's footprint and applauded this application. "I think this is an excellent opportunity to provide that (senior housing)," he said.

Citing the existing use of a guest cottage, ZBA member Dr. Ed Hoffer strongly echoed Nilson's sentiments. Hoffer has been involved in the town's think tank studying and seeking solutions for seniors to age in place, especially widows and widowers who cannot afford to keep up a large house. "I applaud this, I think it's a good use. I don't see how it makes it any worse," said Hoffer.

"This thing's been creeping. ... At this point, it's growing," said Jim Stewart, 21 Cove Street, an abutter situated directly behind Fischer's property.

Designer Stephanie Metz, who represented Fischer to the ZBA, presented a plan to change the second entry to a wall with two small windows, remove the ivy and repair the trim, and add screening to an existing concrete wall.

While Marion Building Commissioner Scott Shippey acknowledged substantial work proposed on the site, Metz said, "It's not exactly a porch," but a structure made of made of brick and stone and shingle halfway up the wall. Only it's not winterized.

There were questions about the redesign and parking, but they faded to the backdrop behind questions and concerns about the structure's evolution.

Stewart offered some background, saying that Joe Marini built a wall in the late 1990s, then it was a garden shed and "kind of grew from there." The next step, said Stewart, was the shed's conversion into a guest cottage. He asked if that conversion was ever vetted by the ZBA, asserting that he never received notice.

He's concerned about that a second floor might be next.

"They would have to dig out a foundation, and that's just not feasible," said Metz, explaining that the building is a slab on grade.

Shippey said that a second floor would necessarily come before the ZBA for consideration of a special permit anyway. The tax assessor's record indicates that the structure has been in place since 1987. "Over 10 years (there is) nothing we can do. It becomes pre-existing, non-conforming," he said, explaining that the statute of limitations for anything related to permitting is 10 years.

That means that, unless the ZBA determines that a project is making a non-conformity worse, it will not reject an application to improve on a structure especially for the purpose of aging in place.

"There is a history of creep in this town," said ZBA member Will Tifft, referencing the porch and subsequently enclosed area. "I'm not going to make a big deal if this, but we need to be careful of it."

ZBA member Margie Baldwin agreed but said the time with this property has passed.

"There is this problem of creep, I understand that," she said. "I don't feel that we in our position now ... we can determine based on years ago that it was built too close to the property (line)."

The most-affected abutter, Julie Albert, 26 Beach Street, had hoped she could use the occasion of this application to gain more control. She asserted that the wall is on her property.

"I don't know how you're going to maintain that wall, and I don't want anyone on my property maintaining it," she said, correcting a reference to ivy. "It's a climbing hydrangea ... that wall continues right to the street. I had it all landscaped and planted to cover that god-awful stuff, and I don't want it touched. I don't want any siding there... It's my property so I hope it's possible. Hope I'm clear."

Baldwin stressed the fact that the footprint will not be changed, calling the driveway adequate and saying it "doesn't impact the neighbors. ... Yes, it's too close to the property line, but it's (already) there," said Baldwin.

In the open-comment portion of the meeting, Tifft asked the board to "keep in mind an increasing footprint can happen in many ways."

Stewart asked for a survey of the property line, asking if it turned out that part of the applicant's property was on an abutter's property, would that not affect the applicant's rights to revise the structure. Shippey said that question remains in the purview of the ZBA because the applicant is not extending the non-conformity of an existing structure.

Stewart also insisted that the kitchen was installed inside of the last 10 years, and he asked Shippey to research the matter.

"You're input is valuable, but it is allowable by the bylaws," said Shippey.

In prefacing discussion with a reference to zoning bylaws 230-8.6 and 230-7.2, ZBA Chair Cynthia Callow also said she has an in-law apartment on her property.

"This is a good thing we're doing. We have many three-season porches turned into four-season and living space so I don't see that encroaching footprints. ... I think this thing's already enclosed," said Barry Gaffey, an interested resident attending the Zoom meeting.

After reviewing the application, the ZBA voted to approve with no nay votes. Alternate member Tucker Burr did not vote.

The board discussed voting protocol later in the meeting, and Callow explained that, as alternate members, Burr and Danielle Engwert don't vote when there are only five votes needed and five are available. Sometimes a 4-out-of-6 vote is needed, and there are also recusals and/or absences. In such cases, Witten says the chair picks the alternate.

Tiftt suggested that the chair lean, rather than strictly deciding on an alternate member's vote based on their area of expertise, toward a randomness "so that you could never be accused of loading the group." Hoffer noted that alternate members are still free to offer their opinions without necessarily voting on a case.

The scheduled continued public hearing with Heron Cove LLC was once again continued, this time to December 23 at 6:30 pm when it is anticipated that Town Counsel Jon Witten and Ken Steen's attorney Mark Bobrowski will be in attendance.

In discussing how to handle future such scenarios, Callow said she would recuse herself from ConCom votes so as not to bias the ZBA).

Marathon Meeting with MBTA

Rochester Conservation Commission

By Marilou Newell

On November 16, the reopened hearing for a Notice Of Intent filed by the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority for a secondary roadway at 45 Kings Highway turned into a marathon of correspondence between engineering teams, the MBTA and the Rochester Conservation Commission's peer-review consultant Environmental Partners, as well as deep dives into technical drainage data.

The public hearing lasted more than an hour and a half and was, as Chairman Chris Gerrior would comment, "a very big bite."

Coming before the commission were members of the MBTA engineering teams, primarily headed up by Jonathan Niro of the BETA Group. Niro would spend the lion's share of the hearing reviewing pages of documented interactions between his firm, members of at least two MBTA engineering firms and Environmental Partners. Point by point, Niro read comments and offered responses to such matters as to whether an existing structure on the property is jurisdictional and whether drainage systems are adequate, including the design and infiltration studies of stormwaters and stream replication plans.

There were several areas of the review that especially piqued the interest of the commission, notably Vice Chairman Daniel Gagne's interest.

Gagne questioned several times why the building on the property should not be included in the commission's review, given that stormwater flowing from beneath the structure ended up in jurisdictional areas. He said that treatment standards for stormwater runoff were set by the state, yet it seemed a state agency was not abiding by those regulations. He also questioned why the commission had not received a report on the separation between groundwater and a planned detention basin.

The MBTA's project manager, Tess Paganelli, said that wetland scientist Brad Holmes had confirmed the acceptance of wetland flagging, however during his site evaluation additional streams were identified, all part of the original cranberry bog located at the site. She said the streams are outside the planned roadway construction but that those would be mapped and added to documents.

While the commission was generally satisfied with wetland replication planning, there remained a long list of unresolved matters.

Gagne stated, "They haven't done what they needed to do ... I don't buy it."

Gerrior said that Environmental Partners noted that the plan was not complete. He also asked that at the next meeting BETA should come with two documents, one listing everything that has, to date, been agreed between all parties and another with open matters pending completion in an effort to make the meeting more concise.

The hearing was continued to December 7.

A.D. Makepeace Company representative Bill Madden of G.A.F. Engineering returned to the commission with a seven-point commentary on restoration plans for a massive site known as Morse Swamp Reservoir.

To recap, the cranberry operator had performed unpermitted activities in the form of wetland dredging, leaving enormous piles of soils in and on jurisdictional wetlands. The filing noted the area in violation as 1,458 linear feet of banking, 17,001 square feet of bordering vegetated wetlands, 200,376 square feet of land under a waterbody, 29,305 square feet of land subject to flooding, and 2,737 square feet of riverfront area. An Enforcement Order had been issued.

On this night, Madden offered a comprehensive restoration plan that included removal of soils, a planting plan, and procedures for performing all necessary activities in jurisdictional locations. The plan was approved by the commission.

An Emergency Certification request by Tom Gadmonski of Agilitas Energy for a culvert repair and new culvert placement at 0 Middleboro Road was granted. Gerrior instructed Gadmonski to advise the neighbor of planned construction dates and timing.

The next meeting of the Rochester Conservation Commission is scheduled for Tuesday, December 7, at 7:00 pm.

for a proposed driveway at 10 Lewis Street, the Marion Conservation Commission engaged in a discussion to more reliably interpret what constitutes an accessory.

"I don't look at an addition to a house as an accessory addition. I think of things like putting a patio in or putting a deck on or you've got a shed ..." said Chairman Shaun Walsh during ConCom's November 17 meeting. "If we consider additions to houses as accessories to houses, one could build a tiny, little house and keep on adding on and adding on. ... Convince me otherwise."

After Walsh asserted that considering additions to a house an accessory "a slippery slope" and suggested the commission checks Negative Boxes 2 and 3, Vice Chairman Jeff Doubrava amended his motion to deleted Box 5.

The members agreed that living space is a reliable guideline in the interpretation of what constitutes an accessory to a dwelling, and they voted a Negative Box 2 and Negative Box 3 Determination, paving the way for Croll's proposed work.

at 24 Brook Haven Lane. Following a commission site inspection on November 13, the members voted to continue the public hearing to December 8.

A bordering vegetated wetland wraps around the property, according to representative Dave Davignon of Schneider, Davignon and Leone Inc.

Noting that the goal of Marion's Riverfront Area Regulations is to keep things as far away from the river as is feasible, Walsh asked Davignon why not construct the master suite on the southwest side of the house. Davignon said that change would only gain 10 to 15 feet while gutting out the house.

Walsh said he thinks the plan constitutes redevelopment of a previously redeveloped area. He suggested Davignon and Guey Lee discuss the matter in greater detail to determine whether the plan fits into the regulations.

The Marion Lands Trust LLC filed a RDA for a reconfiguration of property lines at 371 Wareham Street but with no change in the work already approved by the Marion Planning Board for the driveway. Essentially, the vote allows replacement of the plan of record submitted by Schneider, Davignon and Leone Inc. without filing for an amendment of the Order of Conditions.

J. Thomas Bowler Jr. and Ellen Bowler were voted an Order of Conditions for vegetation management at 7 Moorings Road. ConCom member Mark Bellanger made the motion including "a unique erosion-control condition" that would include storm-damage prevention and flood control.

After a November 13 site visit, Kitt and Heather Sawitsky were voted a Negative Determination of Applicability for the planting of trees and bushes at 75 Holly Road.

Applicant Jay Flanagan was voted an Order of Conditions for a septic-system upgrade and garage additions at 26 West Avenue. Walsh thanked Dave Davignon, the applicant's representative, for examining a pipe on the property.

John and Pamela Lees, who filed a Notice of Intent for reconstruction of a single-family house, an inground swimming pool, along with repair of a seawall with associated work at 49 Water Street, sought and were granted a continuance of their case to ConCom's December 8 meeting.

The next meeting of the Marion Conservation Commission is scheduled for Wednesday, December 8, at 7:00 pm.

The letter proposes policies and measures that would necessarily steer the town away from the consumption of fossil fuels and toward electric power by discouraging any new infrastructure reliant on fossil fuels.

After a consensus on changes including the softening of some language, the committee agreed to have Francis send final edits to Chairman Christian Ingerslev before submittal to Marion's highest elected officials.

The timing of the letter is purposefully thought out as the Town of Marion jumps into the energy aspects of major proposed construction projects: the new Marine Center (harbormaster headquarters) and Department of Public Works facilities.

The problem with Thanksgiving turkey treats for pets

Fats, oils, spices and seasonings in holiday foods, including turkey, can upset dogs' and cats' gastrointestinal systems, so the AVMA suggests giving pets holiday treats made specifically for animals. Although turkey is a common pet food ingredient, Thanksgiving turkey is usually seasoned and cooked with onions, garlic or chives, which can cause serious illness in dogs and cats, and too much turkey fat can cause pancreatitis

Marion Family Chiropractic's Guide to Thanksgiving Spine Survival

Avoid bending directly over the oven door to lift the turkey. Pull the oven rack out, crouch and use your legs and knees to avoid stress on your low back. Also, have a space ready to put the bird, so you're not awkwardly balancing your 25 pound main attraction while clearing space for it.

When preparing food or washing mountains of dishes, put one foot up on a small step stool. Switch feet occasionally. You can also open a cabinet door and put a foot on the ledge to accomplish the same thing. This puts less stress on your spine while you're standing.

If you're going for a long drive to visit friends or relatives this Thanksgiving, make sure to take a break from driving and get out of your vehicle to stretch. This helps restores normal posture.

The same is true for watching hours of after-dinner football. Get up during commercials and move.

When loading your car for a trip (or from the grocery store), make your bags smaller, lighter loads

Make sure your children have a head rest or a child-sized neck pillow so they don't strain their necks falling asleep in the car. Without support, your child's head can flop forward and sideways which affects their breathing and misaligns vertebrae.

Mostly, have a wonderful Thanksgiving with family and friends. And give us a call at (508) 748-6632 if you stressed your spine during the holiday!

EMC member Eileen Marum has been doggedly determined to push for net-zero energy consumption in the new facilities, and she reported to the EMC on a discussion with Representative William Straus.

"He was very interested in the net-zero aspect of it. His feeling is that all of this work needs to start at the local level," said Marum, who also told the committee that Straus believes there is money available at the state level potentially to help make the harbormaster headquarters a net-zero building. Marum said Straus made a note to contact the Select Board or Town Administrator Jay McGrail on the matter.

An hour later in the Marine Resources Commission meeting, Harbormaster Isaac Perry said that the small size of the new Marine Center makes it a difficult structure for net-zero energy, but he acknowledged the potential success of a town-wide approach.

"I hope that the town gets behind these net-zero buildings because this is a topic that's gaining steam at top of government. ... The time for action is now, we're actually behind the curve on this," said Marum, who attended a League of Women Voters meeting this month at the St. Gabriel's Church in which attendees were asked to prioritize five items. She reported that everyone in attendance had climate change at the top of her priorities.

EMC member Bill Saltonstall went on the recent facilities tour and reported discussion with McGrail, whom he said extended an invitation to a meeting being held next week at the Town House, where architects, Perry and McGrail will discuss the new Marine Center.

"The town needs to be net zero, and getting to net zero can happen a lot of different ways," said Saltonstall. "It might happen if we provide the power (via solar projects). Jay recognizes the need to come up with a way to benefit from the town building a solar project. Right now we don't have any, and it doesn't seem reasonable to put him in a position where we can't take advantage of more solar projects."

Saltonstall said the architects and engineers designing the Marine Center and the proposed DPW facility are thinking about heating systems, noting the unlikelihood of gas at Benson Brook. Saltonstall told the EMC members that a well-insulated building equipped with heat pumps might not "get all the way to net zero, but there may be ways for the town to make up a way to get to net zero. ... The architect was most reasonable, he's done a lot of these facilities."

Ingerslev asserted that to some extent Marion is already at net zero via wind power.

Right now, EMC members are trying to figure out how to plot the difference between the amount of energy actually used and the amount supplied by Future Generation Wind so they can determine a maximum amount of energy allowable from solar power. "That's an exercise in progress right now, trying to get that all figured out," he said.

Saltonstall estimates that 95 to 100 percent of the town's power is coming from Future Generation Wind. There was debate as to how to interpret the limitations that the contract with Future Generation Wind places on the town in its effort to maximize its energy production.

Marion is five years into a 20-year contract with Future Generation Wind.

Saltonstall publicly credited SRPEDD's Danica Belknap for her assistance in completing the data input for the town's report to Green Communities, which was submitted a couple of days early. Belknap also assisted with the submission of the Music Hall and Taber Library heating-system grant requests.

ZBA Approves Two Residential Projects

Rochester Zoning Board of Appeals

By Mick Colageo

The Rochester Zoning Board of Appeals met on November 18 and granted a Special Permit and a Variance, both decisions being made without controversy.

Despite reading a lengthy abutters list of Sarah Sherman Road residents, no outside voices responded to an invitation to comment on Case No. 1168. The case, which was rescheduled from October 28 after that meeting was canceled by the widespread power outage that swept through the region, was settled on November 18.

Applicant Ryan Correia was granted a Special Permit to convert an existing living space above his 91 Sarah Sherman Road garage into a multi-family dwelling under Chapter 20.40, Section F.9.a of the Rochester Zoning By-Laws.

As he explained, his in-laws moved away four years ago but, after loss of a job, were looking to come back but could not afford to buy property in the area.

Citing mobility concerns, ZBA Chairman David Arancio said he could not put his in-laws in a second-floor apartment. He was told that, right now, Correia’s in-laws have the mobility to use the stairs and that, from financial and economic standpoints the plan makes the most sense for the family.

Given there is a mudroom or breezeway between the garage and the house, the applicant said that it would be a much more costly project to expand the footprint of the house.

The current second-floor space measures 674 square feet. The gross floor space on the ground floor measures 1,360 square feet and the proposed amount on the second floor 1,219 square feet for a total square footage of 2,579. The required, 40-foot setbacks are well exceeded with 125.6 feet to the rear property line, 100.1 feet to Side 1 and 154.3 feet to Side 2.

It was pointed out that there is no permit on file because the second-floor space had only been permitted for storage space.

“By right, they would need 105,000 square feet so we’re getting pretty close by right at 87,120 and frontage of 300 square feet,” said ZBA member Richard Cutler. “I’m not having much of a problem with this. The fact that they’re not increasing the footprint, I’m having even less of a problem."

After no one responded to an invitation for public comment, the board voted to close public comment and discuss the matter.

ZBA member Thomas Flynn said that the project is not out of character with the neighborhood.

Member Davis Sullivan pointed out that, according to the letter of the bylaw, the frontage required is 222 feet. The applicant explained that the town had incorrect information on file and a subsequently submitted site plan shows that the amount of frontage exceeds the requirement of the bylaw.

The ZBA batted around the ramifications of the Special Permit, and Arancio suggested conditioning the project with no future expansion of the existing structure allowed without coming back to the ZBA for a Special Permit.

As outlined in a motion by Flynn, conditions would make approval of the Special Permit subject to an engineering survey for existing unpermitted work in the space above the garage. In addition, one unit must be owner occupied, all parking must be off street, and any increase in the footprint of the existing structure or expansion of the existing structure would require reapplication to the board.

Flynn, Sullivan, Cutler, Arancio and Kirby Gilmore voted 5-0 in favor.

The ZBA also heard Case No. 1169, in which applicant Molly Fournier sought a variance to her rear setback under Chapter 20.40, Section D.1., so she could construct a deck in the back of her 1950-built house located at 447 Neck Road.

Gilmore drew some chuckles when he speculated as to whether Fournier's house had been moved to its present location. Arancio doubled down on the humor, noting that he almost bought a nearby property. Asked if the property is still available, Arancio said no but noted it's still a sore subject.

Fournier was asked the nature of her hardship requiring the need for a variance. The septic system sits on one side of the house and on the other side a well, leaving only the back side of the house as a place for a deck.

The required rear setback is 40 feet, and the raised deck would come to within 22.8 feet of the property line. Grading up to the deck would require 2 to 3 feet of fill, an expensive endeavor, so Fournier's hardship was also deemed to be financial.

Asked for comment, the conservation agent stated that there are no wetlands on the site so no comments were made. Likewise, the Rochester Historical Commission took no position.

Fournier was voted the variance, allowing construction of the deck.

Commercial Moorings Can Be Transferred

Marion Marine Resources Commission

By Mick Colageo

Harbormaster Isaac Perry proposed to the Marion Resources Commission at its Monday night meeting a tweak to the town's regulations of commercial moorings.

An addendum to the regulations states that existing commercial moorings may be transferred to marine-related businesses with the approval of the harbormaster. "This has been done in the past, but I've been hesitant without it being in the regulations," explained Perry in his report to the MRC.

With the reduction of two grandfathered commercial moorings, Perry says there are now 19 remaining. "There's not a lot left," he said. "In talking about this, we'd like to retain what we can."

Perry said that some existing businesses use town property for their only access. "It would be nice to support these businesses with the remaining commercial moorings that we have left," he said.

Before the MRC voted in the affirmative, MRC Chairman Vin Malkoski led off with a hypothetical scenario for clarification. He asked Perry what if, for instance, Burr Brothers wanted to divest their business of 50 commercial moorings. Perry confirmed that the town would be looking at other commercial interests. Adding one sentence, Perry said, covers what's been done in the past.

MRC member Greg Houdelette asked about the process. "Would people be notified who are on some sort of waiting list? What is the process of notification? 'I'm certainly not looking to notify anybody, not looking to promote this activity ... I don't feel that's our responsibility at all,'" said Perry.

Malkoski doubled down on Perry's stance, saying that the town does not want to be involved in straight business transactions, calling such activity "a conflict of interest."

"All we do is transfer that permit, we don't get into cost or anything like that," said Perry.

MRC member Peter Borsari sought clarification on what constitutes marine business. Malkoski gave obvious examples but no definition per se.

The MRC voted unanimously to accept Perry's rewrite of Item 7 in the regulations, inserting a sentence that says: An existing commercial mooring permit can be transferred with the approval of the harbormaster.

Perry had hoped to keep the original schedule for construction of the new Marine Center and break ground at this time next year, but on Monday night he told MRC members that the Seaport Economic Council would like to see some deliverables on the $303,000 grant awarded before Marion submits the first of two $1,000,000 grant applications.

"This pushes it back to Spring 2023 as the earliest we could break ground," he said.

The next opportunity to apply for the $1,000,000 grant is May 1. "We all felt it was best not to push this forward too quickly. ... It makes sense, it really does," said Perry.

The first $1,000,000 application is geared toward site work and the second $1,000,000 application for construction.

The placeholder that matching funding has place with the Capital Improvement Planning Committee of $600,000 was bumped up to $700,000 following a meeting with the architect. Perry says the $700,000 capital request headed for Spring Town Meeting via the Waterways Account covers the match for the remainder of the project.

The town will take over the cleaning, maintenance and purchase of supplies of the public bathrooms that sit underneath the current harbormaster headquarters.

Some members of Marion's Energy Management Committee submitted a letter requesting the MRC incorporate as many measures as possible to zero out the energy consumption of the new Marine Center.

Malkoski told the commission that he responded, saying the MRC would be happy to discuss the matter but that "it would be particularly beneficial if they could identify some funding sources. ... It would make for a better conversation."

"In talking with the architect ... it's very difficult to achieve net-zero with a building of this size -- it's very small, but ... it's very, very probable that we'll see a reduction in the operating costs. It may not get to net zero, but it's going to be pretty close," said Perry. "I think some of those heating elements in the bathrooms are still original."

The heating of the new Marine Center building will be electric.

"With the town taking over the existing public bathrooms, there's potential to do something there," said Perry, indicating that substantial progress in energy saving would have to be "more of a town-wide approach."

Perry and Malkoski shared their enthusiasm over the open-house tours of proposed project sites that Town Administrator Jay McGrail and the Select Board recently organized.

"It's really beneficial for everyone to go through those questions and actually be at the site," said Perry, noting it is within the Select Board's purview to schedule another such tour during the winter months. "It wouldn't be pleasant, but we could certainly accommodate it."

In making his Shellfish Management report, Deputy Harbormaster Adam Murphy thanked the MRC members for their work on the new Aquaculture Regulations.

"Everybody played a huge part in putting in there what is best for the whole community," said Murphy, who said there has been confusion over the fate of the sites formerly occupied by Shea Doonan.

Murphy confirmed that all prior applications to occupy Doonan's sites are null and void. The town will not advertise. The sites are going to have to be resurveyed and vetted by the state's Marine Fisheries Department.

A revised aquaculture application is now available. Murphy told the MRC that some prior applicants indicated that they will not apply based on the changes in regulations, "but I'm sure there will be others," he said.

Murphy reported that the Town of Wareham saw another discharge of sewage into the Weweantic River so that area has been closed off to shell fishing.

Asked by a MRC member if he has seen any scallops, Murphy said, "Negative ... we haven't seen any yet."

The next meeting of the MRC is scheduled for Monday, December 20, at 7:00 pm.

Marion Capital Improvement Planning Committee

By Mick Colageo

Marion's spending think tank is heading for the final turn, and the holidays will provide a pause for individual opinions to resonate before the town's Capital Improvement Planning Committee achieves consensus sometime in January.

After hearing from the Council on Aging and the Harbormaster Department on November 17, two departments remain that will report their FY23 capital requests and 10-year plans, the Facilities Department on December 1 and the Department of Public Works on December 8.

CIPC Chairman Paul Naiman asked members to produce their own scoring of Marion's FY23 capital projects by December 15 with a plan to reconvene on January 5 to "talk about it."

As a prelude to presentations to the CIPC, department heads confer repeatedly with Town Administrator Jay McGrail, Finance Director Judy Mooney and a Select Board member in order to best shape their capital requests for the new fiscal year.

Up first on November 17, COA Director Karen Gregory presented a $10,000 annual capital request to hire an architect to help design the proposed open-sided structure that would cover and protect buses from snow and ice. Gregory explained, this way, buses will not pose a safety hazard with ice or snow on their roofs, and the covering would extend the life of the vehicle.

The structure would sit behind the Cushing Community Center on a concrete pad that, with the structure, would total approximately $50,000 in construction costs.

Noting that the structure's electrical needs will be a component in the funding, McGrail told the CIPC that he spoke with DPW Director Nathaniel Munafo about the parking lot at the Cushing Community Center.

Select Board member John Waterman called the parking lot "a mess" and said it is "not efficient."

CIPC member Casimiro Barros urged town officials to let the planners know of a "hornet's nest" they will encounter upon excavation.

"Under the parking lot are massive, massive boulders," said Barros, tracing them to the reconstruction of Route 6. "Talk to Demi Barros because he knows the history."

Any plans to improve the parking lot remain subject to a feasibility study that hinges on the future of the adjacent, 40-acre Lockheed-Martin property including a 28-acre footprint of what Waterman described as "a hodgepodge of one-story buildings. ... I don't know if they can be reused."

McGrail anticipates the future of the Lockheed-Martin property to be determined a year from now.

"That doesn't stop this project, does it?" asked Naiman.

McGrail assured the CIPC that Lockheed-Martin would not affect the plan for the carport-like structure behind Cushing Community Center. Marion's COA site sits on a 7 acre parcel on the west side of Route 6 and immediately north of the northeast corner of the expansive Lockheed-Martin property.

In light of recent efforts to improve the grounds, Waterman questioned how any structure large enough to house buses "would enhance the look of the senior center."

McGrail said it has been challenging for Gregory to find a designer and the COA has settled on Yarmouth Port-based Catalyst design the structure. "Ten thousand is probably more than we need to get this thing done right," said McGrail.

Gregory's 10-year plan includes replacement of the walk-in cooler and freezer. The cooler, she said, stopped functioning over a year ago. The COA is looking for any financial opportunity to expand its food service and potentially support a food pantry.

The building needs new flooring and window replacement in the main room.

Naiman suggested that McGrail discussed windows with town Facilities Manager Shaun Cormier, noting that the Police Department does not include window replacement in its CIPC plan. He suggested redirecting windows to Cormier's plan over next few weeks.

Gregory also listed van replacement. She said that every COA vehicle is subsidized by a grant.

Also making her wish list is a family gender-neutral bathroom. Earlier on November 17, Gregory said, the Memory Cafe program had a situation where a spouse was not allowed to enter the restroom and therefore could not provide private assistance. "I would like to see it moved up," she said, referencing a conversation with Cormier.

McGrail noted that a $100,000 addition to the center will be constructed out the back side of the building this winter. He said the sewer line outside is ready for construction and, when finished, the addition that was funded last year will begin its construction.

"I would love to see a building addition," said Gregory.

"Karen's programs have lots of participation. She's only limited by what she can do with her staff," said McGrail.

Waterman, whose interest in Marion demographics has been keen since the regional school budget process began, asked what Marion population will do over the next 10 years. Right now, he said, Marion's average resident is older than the state average.

"We're working on getting money for the tri-town enrollment study," he said.

McGrail said that the town is waiting for the grant period to reopen to take advantage of work done by the Edward J. Collins, Jr. Center for Public Management at UMass Boston.

Harbormaster Isaac Perry's presentation was met with far less banter, primarily because his requests are more cut and dried and based on the ongoing Marine Center project.

For FY23, Perry requested $700,000, the 20-percent match of the remainder of the Maritime Center building project that includes grant applications for FY2022 and potentially FY23. The Seaport Economic Council granted Marion $303,000 for design and engineering work. "We're hoping 80 percent of the entire project will be funded through the Seaport Economic Council," said Perry.

To that end, Perry is scheduling two more applications, each for $1,000,000. McGrail explained that $700,000 is more than 20 percent based on the town's commitment to fund higher than its portion in order to complete the project in a shorter time period.

In summarizing his 10-year plan, Perry listed: $700,000 for FY23; no request for FY24; for FY25 four outboard motors on a three-year replacement (three through the Harbormaster Department and the fourth via a 75 percent state grant); for FY26 a patrol boat at the 20-year mark; for FY27 a $70,000 replacement of a now-new Ford F250 pickup truck (Perry said F150s at their 10-year mark get $10,000 in trade-in value. ... "There are bare-bones pickups," he said, transferring all radio equipment over from the old trucks in contrast to new police cruisers, for instance. F250s, he said, endure salt while F150s rot.); for FY 28 three outboard motors in keeping with the three-year schedule; for FY29, barge-crane replacement based on a 10-year lifespan; for FY30 a new SUV; and for FY31 the three-year replacement of three outboard motors.

"Everything we've done is covered through the Waterways Account," said Perry.

Naiman asked about the maintenance of Marion's docks. Perry estimates there are three dozen docks (floats) that are built in house and financed on an annual line item. "Those floats pay for themselves in a year and a half," he said. "On wharfs, things come up, but we handle that through our normal operating budget."

Perry said there was a FY19 fee increase to put money away for a new boat. He said there is $222,000 in the Waterways Account with 2022 invoices going out in February and March, projecting $460,000 will come into the account.

The next meeting of the Marion CIPC will be held on Wednesday, December 1, at 7:00 pm.

Sports Roundup

By Matthew Curry

The Old Rochester Regional High School girls volleyball team closed out an incredible season on Saturday, winning the MIAA Division 3 state championship for the first time in the program's history. The D3 final took place on November 20 at Bridgewater-Raynham with the No. 4 ranked Bulldogs facing off against No. 2 seed Dennis-Yarmouth for the third time this season, ORR winning, 3-1.

The Bulldogs earned their spot in the finals on November 16 when they defeated No. 1 seed Tewksbury, 3-2, in a semifinal matchup also at Bridgewater-Raynham.

The Bulldogs were down 2-1 going into the fourth set but rallied to win the match and advance to the championship. In the state final, Dennis-Yarmouth got off to an early lead, winning the first set 25-20. The second set started with five ties before the Bulldogs got to a 10-6 lead on a service ace from Aubrie Letourneau. ORR kept the lead thanks to Maggie Brogioli, Sydnee Pires and Ella Soutter before a block from Sally Butler sealed the set, 25-16.

D-Y got off to a 4-0 lead early in the third set, but a kill from Soutter brought the set to 13-9 before she served up four straight points to tie the set at 13-13. The Dolphins were able to take a 19-15 lead once again, but kills from Butler, Pires and Brogioli tied the set at 23-23 before an ace from Kenna Soucy and another kill from Butler clinched the third set, 25-23.

The Bulldogs carried their momentum to an 11-3 lead in the fourth set before D-Y came back to take a 21-18 lead. ORR hung on, though, with Brogioli scoring her 20th kill of the game to bring the set to 24-21 before Soucy clinched the set, 25-21, and secured the championship.

The title victory capped off a 20-game win streak, as the Bulldogs finished the year with a record of 23-2. This was the second time ORR's girls volleyball team has competed in a state championship, previously losing 3-0 against Medway in the 1990 Division 2 championship. It was the first state championship for Old Rochester since

Local League of Women Voters Reorganizes

At a recent meeting held in Marion, the local League of Women Voters announced that its new name, League of Women Voters – South Coast, has been approved by the state-level LWV Massachusetts. This new name reflects the intention of the organization, formerly of the Tri-Town only, to expand to include area communities from Wareham to Westport.

The members present, led by facilitator of the Transition Team Kristen Eastman, reviewed the accomplishments of the group during the pandemic, and learned the by-laws have been revised to include Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion language to represent the intentional goals to represent all in the southcoast communities. Future activities will include outreach to area cities and towns.

Transition Team member and board development professional Elizabeth Hill presented various organization models from which the group is developing its new leadership

The Friends of Mattapoisett Library held a sale on November 20 where donated jewelry and accessories including hats, scarves and pocketbooks were available in the library basement. The event raised approximately $900 to support library programs, including museum passes for the children to attend the either free or at significant price reductions, along with crafts, a fish tank, fish and maintenance tools for the library's children's room, resources for summer visits from petting zoos, and prizes for the Quahog Book Club incentive program. FOML will skip December so as not to compete with the many church fundraisers but will be back on Saturday, January 8, with its monthly used book sale.

On Thursday November 18, 2021, the Tri-Town community came together to support student artists and their activism to help neighbors in need. The Old Rochester Regional High School Art department hosted its second "Empty Bowls" event. This Fall, students in both Ms. Butler's and Ms. Mogilnicki's art classes designed and created ceramic bowls. On the night of the event, patrons made a donation and chose a one-of-a-kind, work of art for their soup. Patrons were able to sit down and visit with others while enjoying their hot soup or could take a container to-go. Either way, each donor left the ORR High School with a hand-crafted bowl as a reminder of their support of "Williams Fund" which serves our local community. It was a lovely evening thanks to the creative work of ORRHS' talented students, a generous donation of delicious soup from Blount Fine Foods and the Cultural Councils of Mattapoisett and Marion. Special thanks to ORRHS/JHS Food Service Supervisor, Carol-Lynn Brown, for her humble hard work and valuable assistance. Carol-Lynn routinely volunteers her out-of-kitchen time to facilitate food collection & distribution in our southcoast towns. The ORR Art Department plans to host their next "Empty Bowls" event in 2023. Photos courtesy Erin Bednarczyk structure and the roles necessary to facilitate focusing on the LWV – SC mission and goals. The organizational structure will be voted on by the end of the year, and the by-laws will be resubmitted to the state League.

Members Luana Josvold and Eileen Marum presented five priorities identified by the LWV Massachusetts from which the local group could select a project focus. Those present selected Climate Change as one of its first priorities. Projects and speakers will follow in the new year.

The League of Women Voters has celebrated its 100 year anniversary this year, and encourages citizens to become involved in its non-partisan mission. Civic engagement and voter education is an overarching theme for all its activities. Men and women are invited to join. The Marion Natural History Museum's afterschool group had fun last week learning why deer and moose grow antlers, when and why they lose them, and where to look for the shed antlers. We talked about horns versus antlers and inspected some of the museum specimens of each. We then split into groups and hid pretend "antlers" outside and had a blast hiding them on each other and trying to locate them in the fallen leaves. Our next afterschool program is December 15th, our holiday party, where we'll be creating crafts from natural and recycled materials. # MOVIE REVIEW

Game, Set, Match

By Rob Gonsalves
www.robsmovievault.com

King Richard. Starring Will Smith and Aunjanue Ellis. Directed by Reinaldo Marcus Green. Running time: 145 minutes. MPAA rating: PG-13. Now playing in theaters and on HBO Max.

You may be forgiven, watching King Richard, for wondering what exactly Richard Williams' deal was. Was he a prophet or a damned lucky delusional? As tennis fans know, Williams is the father of Venus and Serena Williams, two of the greatest tennis players of all time. As the legend goes, Richard planned — literally, a 78-page plan — a future in tennis glory for his daughters before they were even born. He got this notion when he caught Virginia Ruzici on TV winning a tournament. If Ruzici won a lot of money doing this, Richard reasoned, think how much two girls could win. Richard didn't know anything about tennis, but he learned, and he taught his daughters.

Now, what possessed this man to predict that his Black daughters could dominate a theretofore blindingly-white sport, and that they would both be born with the athletic genius to do so? Did Richard receive a nighttime whispered message from a herald? Further, in King Richard, once Richard gets his girls on the right track, he consistently goes against the grain of everything he's advised to do. The girls' coach says they need to start playing in the Juniors? No, Richard says, they're not ready yet. Nike offers a $3 million endorsement deal? Well, Richard says, we're gonna hold off. Richard gambles a frightening amount on his instincts, on his sense that he's right. (We might catch a bit of subtext that Richard, who grew up in hard times abused by racists, is wary of all the received wisdom that comes from white faces — well-meaning, but white.)

Will Smith plays Richard as a batch of conflicting signals — sometimes cramped and cynical, sometimes carried along by his dreams. People, including his wife Oracene (Aunjanue Ellis), keep telling Richard he's heading for a fall, cruising for a bruising. But he has no fear of failure; he seems to fear regret. He doesn't want to look back and mourn the risks he didn't take, the money he left on the table. Smith finds something fiery in Richard's center; the man's entire being and sense of self are tied up in being vindicated. Through his daughters' triumphs, the world will tell Richard Williams that he was right. Richard ticks off one elite coach (Tony Goldwyn) and moves on to another (Jon Bernthal, in the funniest performance) and ticks him off. Nobody has seen things done the way Richard wants them done. This guy is nuts. And yet the world keeps sustaining his vision. Smith uses his star charisma — which makes the audience lean towards him — to make Richard seem nourished by everyone else's doubt. All the film's energy is directed towards Smith; it's Richard's story, not Venus or Serena's.

Richard is an odd man to hold the center of a film that also boasts, somewhere off to the side, two lightning bolts like Venus and Serena. The story Richard tells about himself (and which this movie co-signs) has a Biblical whiff about it: God tells Richard (or Noah, or whoever) that this thing is going to happen, must happen, and you've got to prepare for it. The Richard of this movie (truly I know little of the man aside from what Smith, director Reinaldo Marcus Green, and writer Zach Baylin give us) is a prickly, flawed, arrogant, possibly great man whose character goes somewhat unresolved, our questions unanswered. And it's not that the movie is trying to be the sportsball equivalent of Last Year at Marienbad or anything; it just recognizes there's more to him, to anyone, than even two hours and twenty-five minutes can capture.

Alas, this male's vision is mightily supported by a woman (Aunjanue Ellis comes through with a loving, sensible turn that even in moments of quiet watchfulness is the film's moral compass) and by, of course, two girls. If not for them, there'd be no him. King Richard plays us out with Beyoncé's "Be Alive," which is about Venus and Serena: "We fought and built this on our own." True enough. But the movie needs Richard's righteous self-regard; it would be too close to a standard sports biopic without it. All the familiar beats are there, the advances and seeming setbacks, leading up to the big game with the whole universe hanging on it, and ... well, you've seen sports films before. But maybe you haven't seen Richard before.

The 248-acre White Eagle property supports a rich diversity of habitats including upland pine, mixed hardwood forest, shrub and wooded swamp, freshwater marsh, and cranberry bogs. The White Eagle property and surrounding land make up a 482-acre contiguous parcel of land that is home to several rare and threatened species including the Eastern Box Turtle, the Spotted Turtle, and the Water-willow Stem Borer.

White Eagle is located off of Route 6 in Marion. Turn onto Parlowtown Road across from the town cemetery and follow road until you reach the cul-de-sac. Veer left onto the dirt road and follow past an abandoned cranberry bog on your right. The dirt road is bumpy so please use caution when driving down dirt road. Parking is available directly past the bog and along the dirt roadside. The kiosk is a short walk beyond.

Please dress appropriately for the day's weather and please bring water for your canine companion(s) and you. Only the worst weather will cancel an SLT walk. talk about food increases daily, so I thought it might be a good time to see what the early residents of Rochester were eating. Near the beginning of his memoirs, Abraham Holmes, born in 1754, describes life in Rochester when he was "a lad". At this time people ate what they and their neighbors grew or raised.

To give you an idea of what that would mean, farmers grew mainly 2 crops, wheat and turnips. A farmer would typically harvest 5-15 bushels of wheat, which was ground into flour and used sparingly. There would be 10-40 bushels of turnips. Some potatoes were grown but a "monstrous crop" would be 3 bushels. The potatoes were very small and he writes that he was almost fully-grown before he saw one "as big as a hen's egg". Diets had very little variety with porridge playing a big role.

Bread and milk or porridge (broth with beans and seasoning ) was eaten for both breakfast and supper. Dinner at mid-day would be boiled meat or fish and a vegetable. One staple dish was called " Bang-Billy " which was beans cooked with crumbled bread, (which sounds like just another version of porridge to me). There was also a plum porridge. More people had pigs than cattle and he doesn't mention chickens which were everywhere in town in later years.

Beverages were sweetened water, cyder (cider), Bohea tea sweetened with brown sugar; coffee and chocolate, both sweetened with molasses. The coffee might be made from white oak leaves, walnuts, or crusts of bread. He mentions that not many had milk, but those who did would have it with toasted bread or roasted apples for breakfast. Breakfasts on the Sabbath were more apt to have donuts or pancakes to go with the coffee or chocolate.

He writes that a "great account was made of thanksgiving days" which had nothing to do with today's Thanksgiving. They could be held at any time of year when the community had something for which to be thankful. On such days, each family would prepare the best food they could afford for supper. After the meal, the young people would spend the evening dancing. Good dancing was considered to be a very important accomplishment. The dances were primarily reels with names like, George, Cape Breton, and the Rolling Hornpipe. As you can see this is all a far cry from our modern Thanksgiving that didn't begin until the mid -19th century. Happy Turkey Day.

Seeking Mattapoisett Gardens

Mattapoisett gardeners, do you have a garden you'd like to share with others for part of the day on June 25, 2022? Mattapoisett residents, do you have a garden to recommend that you've always wanted to see?

The Mattapoisett Woman's Club Garden Group is seeking local gardens for their June 2022 Garden Tour. If you are interested in having your garden on the tour, please contact Kathy McAuliffe by email at kathymcauliffe7@gmail.com.

On the day of the tour, ticketholders are invited to view gardens selected for a variety of gardening styles from formal to informal, woodsy to cottage-style, seaside to secluded. The gardens usually highlight the use of annuals, perennials, vegetables, herbs, shrubs, trees, and even beautiful container plantings. The locations of the garden are revealed on a map the day of the tour.

The proceeds of the garden tour will benefit the Mattapoisett Woman's Club Scholarship Fund. The Mattapoisett Woman's Club is always open to new members from the South Coast area. For more information and a membership application, please see the Club's website: www.mattapoisettwomensclub.org/members/.
